

English Suits of Black and Gray For the Younger Girls

INFANTS' AUTUMN WARDROBES

SHOULD BE READY NOW

Mothers Should Be Prepared for Frost With the Last Days of Summer.

These last days of summer are the time in which baby's autumn and winter wardrobe should be arranged, so that nipping weather that comes with frost will not find him unprepared.

The first change comes in putting on a thin flannel petticoat if none has been worn during the summer, and in substituting a light weight merino undershirt, high neck and long sleeves, for the thin, low neck and sleeveless garment that he should be wearing.

This should be done before October 1, or as soon as the days become chilly and rainy. Long stockings are not a necessity yet, but it is of the utmost importance whenever baby is taken out that he shall have an extra wrap for the shoulders and something to throw over the legs in case of a sudden change in temperature. Under his mull cap let there be a thin silk lining to protect his head.

As soon as the nights become frosty cotton nightgowns worn in summer must be taken away and those of thin flannel used instead. Do this and there will be no need of shutting outdoor air from his sleeping room. Indeed, to let in fresh air simply because it is chilly is a mistake. Baby needs and will thrive upon it if he be properly protected from cold.

Should the little one kick off the bed coverings, safety pins that come for the purpose must be used to hold them in place. Pin sheets, etc., that there may be no danger of the child's getting uncovered. As a further protection against cold, make the nightgown in the form of flannel bags. Sew them across the bottom, about eight inches longer than baby's height. Make the opening to button at the back sufficiently long that he may be cared for during the night without difficulty. Older children who are restless at night should wear flannel drawers with feet covered. For a baby's crib should be very light in actual weight, otherwise his body becomes tired under the burden. Warmth in the bedding is essential, and the best combination for this is a pair of blankets with an eiderdown quilt, or if that be too expensive, one of cotton wool. The blankets alone should be enough at this season.

The greatest care must be taken that baby does not get cold while receiving his morning bath in the first days of autumn. The mornings now have a chill to which he is most susceptible, and to insure against possibility of cold, artificial warmth of some kind should be provided. To secure this, if there is no open fireplace, one should have a large kerosene lamp with heating drum attachment. This should be lighted for an hour before giving the tub, so no room will be evenly warmed.

If for any reason it is not convenient to heat in this way, and a mother has a gas range in the kitchen, she may be able to give baby his bath there until steam or other heat is provided for all the rooms.

By the middle of September baby should be in the house as soon as the sun goes down. The change in temperature at this season is too great for him to bear without catching cold.

GIRL'S SUIT

The suit in the above illustration is developed in black and gray English suiting. The coat is made loose, having a bias fold of the goods stitched over the shoulders, back and front, and buttons on the left side. The collar is made of black velvet. Two rows of buttons are placed down the front. The sleeves are the regulation coat sleeve. The skirt is laid in inverted box plaits all the way round.

NEW RECIPES

Russian Liver

Cook a calf's liver until tender, chop it finely with some fat pork, two tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs and a small onion. Season with salt and pepper; bind with beaten egg. Make into rolls and bake three-quarters of an hour. Serve with gravy.

Ham and Egg Loaf

Chop remnants of cold boiled ham, add crushed crackers and from three to six eggs, well beaten, according to the amount of your meat. Bake in small tin, and when cold it can be sliced.

Corn Pudding

To one pint of corn (if canned press it through a colander; if fresh, cut very fine from the ear, add two eggs, one tablespoonful of flour, butter (melted) the size of an egg, one pint of milk, salt and sugar so as to be neither salt nor sweet, a x-cube and a little pepper. Bake in a greased dish until the custard is set or the handle of a silver spoon will come out clean. Serve with broiled chops or steaks or with roast lamb.

Cheese and Eggs

This is very like a rarebit, but more easily prepared and more readily digested. Cut fine or grate a half pound of cheese. Put in a saucepan with a cupful of rich milk or thin cream, a tablespoonful of white pepper. Stir over a moderate fire until the cheese is melted; then add four well-beaten eggs. Stir until like a thick custard, then turn into a hot dish and serve quickly with toasted crackers.

New Blues.

Nattier lingers. Peacock is liked. Canard (duck) is lovely. Navy is an old, old friend. Raudnitz (the chase the dye) is greenish. The grayish shades are retained to a degree. As a rule, though, the new blues are richer and more greenish.

Handsone Costumes

The Front Window

From the cheapest cottons to the finest fall fabrics, one sees now and again something noticeably striking in a dress, something of a combination never before seen and having a smack of individuality in plan and workmanship. Such a dress was seen this week. It was a costume of brown marquisette, neatly plaited on the skirt, the side gores trimmed with velvet ribbon outlined with cord passementerie. The blouse was made with a yoke and bell sleeves of dyed lace to match the color of the dress material, and the sleeves beneath the bell forms were of finely plaited brown mousseline, elbow length. Sleeve caps and yoke were outlined with brown velvet ribbon. The skirt was made of one of the fall shades mostly in favor. It is a soft brown and, in most cases, is seen trimmed with dark brown velvet bands, dark brown buttons or some material in silk or satin of a tone to contrast nicely with the background. In this particular shade is very trying even to those who can wear almost all of the brown colors. It is one material, however, which suits to perfection the woman with ruddy hair and clear complexion, and usually the woman with auburn hair has the blessed gift of a clear white complexion.

Hats are also shown in this color, and mostly trimmed with black or dark brown. The little street hat has already made its appearance on the street and is quite gay with soft, fluttering feathers which are dyed exactly by the same shade as the feet of the hat. Auto coats are seen in this color, and some of the new models are decidedly Quakerish and prim with absolutely no trimming whatever, even the buttons being invisible.

Fancy Blouse.

Rose pink landsdowne, tucked horizontally across shoulders and perpendicularly below square yoke formed of bands of heavy lace applied in rose silk, and having rose landsdowne revers trimmed with three large flat cut steel buttons. Pointed chemise of tucked chiffon applied with lace and the rose silk. Long shoulder effect gained by square cape of silk applied lace. Draped landsdowne of three-quarter sleeves, finished with turned-back cuffs of black velvet, pointed with applied lace and large buttons. High collar of lace edged with black velvet. Black velvet girdle, pointed back and front and short over hips. Placed rose landsdowne skirt with plaited sides.

Scarabs in Favor

Scarabs are much affected now among these fond of antiquities. Your scarab may not be genuine antiquity, but so long as your friends don't know it it's all right.

Did you ever observe when gazing at a house, no difference how modest the architectural part, that there was something of interest in the windows reflected home life within? And there is no doubt that windows are an index to interior conditions. The houses where only dark-curtained windows greet one, for some reason never have an inviting appearance on the inside. How much beauty is expressed by plain, though pretty curtains back of clean glass windows, while there is seen one graceful plant or several in neat array. It means a great deal to the appearance of the home. Any dealer who is going to sell a certain piece of property would prefer to have the house neatly furnished, which is invariably done when possible, as it really makes a home more valuable in appearance because the bareness is not apparent. So much for decorations. Yet the window can be made very unattractive by one catching a glance at dying flowers, grimy flower crocks or semi-sold table linen covering the stand. There is an aim to produce an artistic effect, no flowers are better than an ill assortment. The handy little tin cans are splendid for holding cuttings, though they certainly are not attractive unless enameled or painted. The dark green or red paint used for this purpose, and will last longer than the paper covers. If a single fern, palm, or a plant in a flower pot, the crock in one of the wicker jardiniere. China and brass ones may be used for ornamental purposes throughout the house, though flowers never flourish in them unless, perhaps, they are aquatic plants like floating hyacinths, and the various water lilies grown from bulbs. Do not crowd your windows, and select flowers which are beautiful and ornamental.

Burn Your Letters

—Think of your letters.
—Above all your love letters!
—The best scheme is to burn them.
—Otherwise anything may happen to them.

—Fancy your granddaughter stuffing a cushion with them!
—Worse yet, if you become famous she'll no doubt sell them!
—Fancy those pages of palpitation held up to the gaping crowd!
—Fancy the industrious auctioneer haranguing the idler, the dealer, and the rest, trying to wring another dollar out of them for a particularly torrid effusion.

Sleep Often Cures Ailing Babies

If you wish to have baby a strong child, see that he sleeps enough. This one thing alone, of course, is not sufficient to insure health, but it is a most important factor, and one that may be neglected when warm weather makes him fretful and wakeful. Of course, he should sleep in a crib by himself. To have him in bed with you is quite one of the worst things that you can do, for it is weakening to the baby, and he may be actually injured if you are a restless sleeper.

The most common causes of wakefulness are indigestion, improper clothing, hunger, or overfeeding, but teething and illness, slight or otherwise, will prevent sleep. If you haven't a clinical thermometer, get one. It is invaluable as showing baby's temperature, and thus indicating his state of health.

The temperature of the body in health is a little below 98½ degrees Fahrenheit, marked on the thermometer with an arrow. When the heat of the body at rest exceeds 100 degrees, or falls below 97 degrees, except under very rare conditions, danger may be apprehended and medical advice should be sought without delay.

In using the thermometer the bulb should be placed in the armpit, next to the skin, and not touching any article of clothing, and the arm drawn over the chest. It should be kept there for four or five minutes, then the temperature of the body read off and the mercury brought down again to the arrow by gently tapping the thermometer against the palm of the hand.

An alcohol sponge will frequently send the temperature to normal when it is slightly above at this season, for the rise may be due to the extreme heat of the weather. Feverishness or a slight increase is not necessarily a thing to be alarmed at, for most trifling causes will send it up.

From the time he is two months to two years old, he should sleep in the twenty-four, the amount, of course, decreasing as he grows older. From two years until four he should have two hours' sleep during the day besides what he has at night.

Frosted Moonshine Pudding

Two ounces of butter, half a pint of milk, three bananas, two eggs, three ounces of currants, thin bread and butter, a little sugar and nutmeg. Line a buttered pie dish with bread and butter, place over this a layer of finely sliced banana, sprinkle over with currants, and add a little sugar and nutmeg. Then put another layer of bread and butter, more banana, currants, sugar and nutmeg, and continue till the dish is nearly full. Melt the butter, mix it and the yolks of the eggs, and the milk, pour over the contents of the dish and bake gently for half an hour. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, sweeten with castor sugar, and pile lightly over the pudding. Set it back in the oven until the meringue is lightly browned, then stew with sifted sugar before serving.

Souvenirs.

There are souvenirs and souvenirs. In one sense the souvenir is a thing of beauty.

It represents the thought of a loved one.

Or it may suggest the delights of some spot once visited.

Souvenirs of this type are among life's pleasant things.

Quite another story is the "souvenir" which represents a theft.

Of a truth there's nothing more disgusting than the half-baked creatures who go about mutilating trees, clipping marbles and otherwise adding to their collections.

Fancy Beltings Pretty

The fancy beltings were never prettier. They look like elastic, but have a slight cord in them, just enough to keep them taut and at the waist line closely. They are shown in all colors, or white with colored figures, but the daintiest is all white with raised silk figures. The buckles that are worn are merely of frame work, and the belting is fastened to a slide and catch and run through the buckle itself.

MY SOUL.

My Soul stood hard to the sight of men, My Soul stood firm: it knew no fear.

For the blame of man could not be just, The mind of man could not understand.

My Soul stood hard in the sight of a child, It stood condemned: for it stood perceived.

For the blame of a child is the blame of Truth,

The heart of a child may not understand.

My Soul stood hard in the sight of God, And my Soul rejoiced in his helplessness.

For the blame of God was forgiveness, The Mercy of God could understand.

—Edward F. Gilechrist, in Harper's Weekly.
